Arab-African Clash Surfaces at UN

The African states at the UN are resisting Arab moves to introduce an anti-Israeli polemic into an African-sponsored resolution on eliminating racism and apartheid.

Radical Arab states amended the resolution by demanding that "Zionism" be considered a form of racial discrimination, similar to apartheid in its effects. The EC Nine, other West Europeans and the US have said they will oppose any resolution that links Zionism with racial discrimination.

The Africans realize that such broad opposition jeopardizes passage of the resolution. They have been urging the Arabs to withdraw their amendments, and the Arabs may respond by introducing their own resolution condemning Zionism. Committee votes on the apartheid resolution have been postponed while the two groups attempt to resolve their differences.

Greek Prime Minister Plans Cabinet Shuffle

Greek Prime Minister Karamanlis reportedly intends to carry out his first cabinet reshuffle since last February. The changes could be announced on the first anniversary of the parliamentary elections on November 17. Most of the key Ministers are expected to retain their posts.

The most significant change is expected to be the replacement of ailing Public Order Minister Ghikas who is far on the political right and served under the junta. His departure will please the political opposition, although Karamanlis probably will replace him with another rightist--albeit someone without a junta connection--in order to placate the military.

The press speculates that the industry, agriculture, education, and transport portfolios will also change hands.
